

I believe that the lifting of the cell phone ban would not be in my best interest. After time away from home, I look forward to using my travel time to relax before I come home to my family. For those interested in lifting this ban, I suggest the spend some time on a few airplanes during taxi-in time and pay attention to how people react to cell phone use at that time. How many people really can't go without their phone for a few hours? Thanks for your attention.
